FERRY COTTAGE

In the 1840s the Rector, Henry Dampier Phelps, found 'the number constantly passing, at all hours, & their shouting to call the Ferryman became so very annoying on the Sunday during Divine Service' that he tried to move the path to the ferry away from the church. He could not do so, so instead

'I assisted Edward Baker to build a House on my Glebe to be near his work, & to keep all things quiet. The Oak fence & my assistance to Baker cost me about £100. The rest of the expense was borne by him: to whom I promised as long a Lease as I could grant, on gaining the Bishop's consent: and that he should pay me Five Pounds per an.: as Rent for the Glebe & my share of the building One half of which I intend to give to the support of the Sunday School. The Bishop hitherto / 1848 / has not given his sanction.
